Being Prepared For the Day
Surviving Deadly Force Encounters

When: June 22 & 23, (Monday & Tuesday) 2020, 8:00 - 5:00
Where: Wake Tech Public Safety Training Center, 321 Chapanoke Road, Raleigh, NC 27603

Being in an Officer-involved shooting or critical incident produces uncertainties, stress and fears of what will happen next. Undue anxiety can develop within both personal and professional relationships and effect job performance and home life. This class is for the officer who wants to better understand the dynamics of a deadly force encounter and to prepare themselves for that day.

Being Prepared for the Day offers an in-depth analysis of what occurs during and after an officer-involved shooting along with information to better prepare you before the incident can happen.

This 16 hour class utilizes personal interviews with more than thirty officers who have used deadly force, partner officers, spouses and significant others, criminal... investigators, prosecutors, police administrators, defense attorneys, medical professionals, law enforcement trainers and media persons.

Training Objectives

At the conclusion of this block of instruction, students will be able to;

1. List their priorities following an officer-involved critical incident.

2. Communicate their limitations and abilities in using deadly force as provided by North Carolina General Statues 15A-401(D)(2).

3. Identify resources available to them or their family following an officer-involved critical incident.

4. Categorize lifesaving efforts when confronted with massive hemorrhaging.

5. Describe the differences between the criminal investigation and the administrative investigation following a officer-involved shooting.

Instructor:

Eddy Summers is a 32-year veteran of law enforcement. Following his retirement from the Greensboro, North Carolina Police Department in 2013, he continues to serve as a reserve officer.
