The Burden of Command
This course is designed to provide supervisors and managers with necessary tools for enhancing the performance of the work unit. The course examines five critical areas that relate to one’s ability to be both a leader and manager. These five areas are described as “Burdens” due to the ongoing labor required to change the Commanders behaviors.

These “Burdens” are taught in five modules during the course:
• The Burden of Self awareness
• The Burden of Competence
• The Burden of Servant hood
• The Burden of Communication
• The Burden of Management
The course focus is to understand and prepare for the position of supervisor and know how to balance the responsibilities of management with the requirements of leadership.

Instructor

John Edwards completed a 30 year carrier with GBI, spending the last seven years before retirement in 2008 as Special Agent in Charge of Region 5, Statesboro, Georgia. Mr. Edwards is a well known lecturer/instructor who has developed and taught numerous law enforcement topics all across the US to federal, state, and local LEO'S. John is a former adjunct instructor with the Georgia Law Enforcement Command College at Columbus State University and a veteran Georgia POST certified police trainer.

The current course is one of those he teaches at the Command College:
“Effective Leadership”
“High Profile Case Management”
“Felony Task Force Management”
“Burden of Command”

In 2012, John became an executive board member and manager of the peace officers association of Georgia, the state’s oldest and largest law enforcement association that promotes officers professional growth and development through training and professional standards.

John consults for both national and international police agencies and has published numerous national and international articles regarding the management of criminal investigations, major incident management, leadership, and law enforcement operations.

ENROLLMENT: Open to federal, state and local sworn LEO’S, prosecutors and Intelligence Analysts.
